

GIRL KILLED IN BOATHOUSE

YOUNG MEN WHO WERE WITH HER FOUND STUPFIED.

Atlantic City Boardwalk Shop Employee and Her Companions Overcome by Gas While Drinking—Men Arrested, Say Her Death Was Accidental.

ATLANTIC CITY, Nov. 14.—As the result of a night of revelry in a boathouse on the Atlantic City boardwalk, the 18-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Clark of 2023 Baltic avenue, lies dead in the morgue and Arthur Penny, Jr., and Walter Reynolds, companions of the girl in the escapade, are in jail here after a narrow escape from sharing her fate. Gas that leaked into the room from an improvised fitting was the direct cause of the tragedy.

It is estimated that the gas was not detected because all three were intoxicated. The young men are still dazed and have but a dim recollection of what occurred. Both insist, however, that the girl went with them of her own free will. City detectives have not yet completed their work, but profess to believe that the death of the girl was accidental.

Soon after daylight this morning James Endicott, a fisherman and tenant of one of the rooms in the big and lonely boathouse, saw a light burning in the room that he knew had no regular tenant, and after repeated knocks brought no answer opened the door.

"I saw the girl lying on the bed even as I stepped back to dodge the rush of gas," he said. "I did not see the men, but stumbled over them lying on the floor as I crossed the room."

Endicott called for help and dragged the body of the girl and her unconscious companions into the air. Fry, a policeman, answered the call, but hurriedly summoned physicians could do nothing for the girl, who had been dead for more than an hour. The young men were taken to the City Hospital, where they recovered consciousness after hours of treatment.

The story of the cause of the tragedy was quickly shown to the police. Empty beer bottles and glasses were on the oiled-covered table in the little room. A leaking tube leading to a small stove was pouring forth gas.

A small boy first identified the dead girl from having seen her in a Boardwalk candy shop during the summer. Word was sent at once to the mother, who was found just as she was starting out for the police station to report her daughter missing since last night. She was taken to the morgue, where she fell unconscious when she saw the face of her girl.

From what the police can gather it appears that the trip to the boathouse was planned by the two young men and the girl yesterday or before. Robert Lowry, one of the occupants of the boathouse, told of a request from young Penny for the use of the unoccupied room for a night. Lowry says he did not approve of the use to which he believed the place was to be put and refused. Later, however, the young men got the key that admitted them.

Although refusing to admit any criminal intent or actions on the part of himself or his companion young Penny said to-night that the affair was a planned revel. He told the police that he and Reynolds, both of whom are well known young men about town, met the girl by appointment and went with her to the boathouse. They lighted the gas and then patched up the pipe leading to the stove to get some heat.

"We all got dopy, but thought it was the drink and the stupor," he said. Penny says that he even had a slight recollection of the girl falling over in a stupor, but by this time the gas had numbed both him and his companion and they fell unconscious before they could reach the window or door.

The girl was well known in Atlantic City and the affair has created a sensation. Her parents say that they had no idea that she was anything but a dutiful daughter and above reproach, but acquaintances tell of similar escapades in the last year since she has been employed in the Boardwalk shop.

No direct charge has yet been filed against the two young men, who will be held, however, subject to the findings of the coroner. Their parents say they are sure that the girl's death was the result of an accident and have engaged lawyers to try to get the prisoners out on bail. The boathouse where the tragedy occurred is a centre of yachting interest in summer. Hundreds of well known Philadelphians have cottages and boat slips along the basin which it fronts and a score of family parties occupy small apartments under its roof. In winter, however, the place is practically deserted except for caretakers. So far no one can be found who saw the young men and the girl enter the room or who heard any sounds of revelry there.

SHOT THREE OF THE FAMILY

WANDERING SCHWARTZ TURNS UP IN NEW YORK THIS TIME.

Bullets for the Woman Who Wouldn't Be His Mother-in-Law and for Two of Her Daughters, and One for Himself When a Crowd Hunts Him—He May Die.

Morris Schwartz, a young Philadelphia Jeweller, came to New York last night to try once more to get the mother of his sweetheart to give her consent to a marriage, and failing shot the mother, wounded two of her daughters by mistake and finally shot himself. He may die. The others are not badly hurt.

Schwartz is 22 years old and lives with his parents at 516 North Second street, Philadelphia. He has been courting Yetta Samowitz, who lives with her widowed mother, a big brother who is a butcher and several sisters on the third floor of 742 Sixth street. Two months ago he asked Mrs. Samowitz to let him marry Yetta and she refused. Since then he has made several attempts to get her to change her mind.

Last night he turned up at the Samowitz flat at 10 o'clock and asked to see Mrs. Samowitz. He told her somewhat heatedly that he had come to ask her once more. When she again declined to admit him as a member of the family he took a revolver from his pocket and fired at her. The bullet struck her collarbone and glanced off. When she fell he fired three more shots, apparently intended for her. One hit Anna, a sixteen-year-old sister of Yetta, in the right side, and the other two bullets pierced the right forearm of another sister, Rose, 21 years old, who tried to take the pistol from him.

Then Schwartz ran out of the room, down the stairs and into the street. The injured daughters of the family, assisted by a young man who was calling on Rose, chased him and closed in on him at Avenue B. Schwartz, when he saw the pursuers close behind him and that they had been reinforced by about half the neighborhood, put the pistol to his mouth and fired again. The Samowitz girls and Rose's young man and the others dragged him back to the flat house and sent for Policeman Warren, who called an ambulance, and Schwartz and Rose were taken to Bellevue Hospital.

Schwartz had in his pocket a newspaper clipping dated October 26, headed: "Jilted, He Travels Two Weeks in a Trance."

Under a Philadelphia date line the clipping told how Milton A. Schwartz, son of a well-to-do Philadelphia silk merchant, had wandered from Philadelphia to Brooklyn, Mass., and wild-eyed and pale had gone into a restaurant. The manager of the restaurant, believing something to be the matter with the boy, called a policeman and had him arrested, and he had told how he had been jilted.

Schwartz was unconscious when taken to the hospital but recovered sufficiently to tell the police that he had gone to the Samowitz home with the intention of either winning Yetta or shooting her mother.

Material Price Concessions On Women's Suits &amp; Coats

The inevitable condition obtains as the season progresses—odd suits accumulate. In order to avoid this condition we have gathered together the ones, twos and threes of a kind and subjected them to the penalty of material price reductions. These suits are of a high and distinctive order, rising above the level of that which the average shop affords.

57 Suits Reduced from as high as $125. Imported broadcloth in the new Directorate and hipless models. The greater number are copies of imported suits in black and latest shades. Hardly two suits of a kind.

86 Suits Reduced from as high as $85. Fashioned of fine broadcloth in a variety of fancy trimmed and severely tailored models. In black and colors.

92 Suits Reduced from as high as $59. These are of fine broadcloth, mannish waisted, novelty mixtures and chevrons in fancy trimmed and plain severely tailored models.

Coats New modifications of the Directorate coat, of light weight Kersey and English tweeds. High embroidered collars, closing with ruche of satin ribbon.

AUTO KILLS REV. DR. MORGAN

NEW HAVEN RECTOR STRUCK IN FRONT OF HIS CHURCH.

Skull Fractured, He Never Regained Consciousness—Hurrying Across Street He Didn't See Car—Pastor of Christ Church and Leading Episcopalian.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 15.—The Rev. Dr. George Brinley Morgan died just before 1 o'clock this Sunday morning as the result of being run down by an automobile yesterday afternoon as he was crossing the street from the parish house of Christ Protestant Episcopal Church, this city, to his home.

Dr. Morgan had been rector for the last twenty-two years of Christ Church. It is one of the largest churches in the diocese.

Mr. Morgan had been chatting with the sexton of his church. Bidding him good-by he started across Broadway to a drug-store. As he neared the middle of the street he started to hurry and had neared the curb when Samuel Campbell, an automobile dealer, tore down on him at a fast clip. Before Dr. Morgan saw the car he was struck.

He lay motionless upon the ground. When raised he was unconscious. It was found later that his skull was fractured. He did not regain consciousness before death came.

Across the street his two daughters, Miss Dorothy and Miss Emily Morgan, were taking part in the entertainment in the church. They hurried across the way in time to see their father being placed in an ambulance. Miss Dorothy Morgan immediately left for New York to break the news to her mother, who recently has been operated upon at Roosevelt Hospital. Mrs. Morgan, with a nurse and her daughter, arrived in this city late this evening.

At the time of the accident Dr. Morgan's only son, Dennison, a freshman at Yale, was attending the Yale-Harvard football game at Yale Field. On his way to town at the close of the game he bought a newspaper to read an account of the Yale-Princeton game and saw the headlines announcing the injury of his father.

Dr. Morgan was born in Hartford, Conn., sixty years ago. He was the oldest son of Henry K. Morgan and the late Emily Morgan of that city. He was graduated from Trinity College, a theological seminary at Nashotah, Wis. He was rector of a parish at Exeter just before coming to New Haven in January, 1887.

Since coming here he has built the present church edifice at a cost of $150,000 and a large parish house.

In 1902 Dr. Morgan was chosen Bishop Coadjutor of the Diocese of Springfield, Ill., but was forced to decline on account of ill health. At the Episcopal convention in Baltimore in 1904 and in Richmond in 1907 Dr. Morgan represented his diocese. Since 1904 he has been a member of the General Board of Missions. At the commencement exercises of Trinity College in June, 1904, he received the degree of doctor of divinity.

Mr. Morgan, before his marriage, was Miss Mary Nelson of Peekskill, N. Y. She is a cousin of Elsie French, the former wife of Alfred G. Vanderbilt. Mrs. Vanderbilt's mother, who died this country earlier in the year or last year because of the business depression. The largest previous influx of working folk from Europe, 1,054, this year arrived on November 7 by the American ship, the Kaiserin Augusta. The American line regards the coming of this advance army of producers as a sure indication of the approach of prosperity.

Mr. and Mrs. Morgan have four children. Their oldest daughter, Mrs. Edward Firth of Sheffield, England, was married at the chateau of her uncle, Edward Tuck, a Paris banker, in September, 1907.

Dr. Morgan was a leader among the Episcopal clergy in New England who advocated the high church. He has been one of the most popular rectors in the Connecticut diocese.

Campbell was held by the police pending the result of the injuries to Dr. Morgan. This is the third bad automobile accident within three days. Edwin Lindeblad was killed on Friday by an automobile driven by State Senator Alton Farrell of Ansonia. Yesterday the coroner exonerated Mr. Farrell of a charge of criminal negligence. Last evening the machine of Game Warden David H. Clark, a contractor here, struck and instantly killed Fred T. Case, superintendent of the street department of the Southern New England Telephone Company. Case was standing near a manhole directing work in a conduit in the centre of the city.

Laborer Who Caught Murderer Gets $500

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J., Nov. 14.—Vincenzo Viscio, an Italian laborer employed at Cliffwood, received from the Board of Freeholders of Middlesex county this morning a check for $500 for capturing Glacinti Ricci of Cliffwood, who is to be put to death Christmas week for assaulting and murdering a three-year-old girl at Cliffwood on September 6.

FERRERO ON CROOKED HISTORY.

Cleopatra No Beauty—Cesar a Politician Killed by the Plutocrats.

Guglielmo Ferrero and his wife, a daughter of Lombroso, who landed yesterday from the French liner Le Savois, in from Havre, while mated intellectually are in contrast physically, the husband being six feet and a half tall and blond with a tawny mustache and goatee, and the wife being a little woman. Ferrero has the reputation of being a historian who tells the whole truth about the mighty folk of the pagan past. He will spend several days in this city and then will go to Boston and lecture. Later he will see the President.

He said that Roman history was full of fiction. The love of Cleopatra and Antony had more of an element of political friendship than of the real passion. The tendency of the historians of Rome was to paint in too dark colors the wicked and to exaggerate the virtues of the great. Cleopatra was not beautiful, but was clever; Caesar was a politician of the democracy who was killed by the plutocrats because they did not like his ways; Leonidas was not so big a man as he had been painted; legend had taken the place of fact and many of the alleged incidents of Roman history.

Ferrero said that he had been aided much in his historical researches by inscriptions unearthed in Asia Minor. He said that all ancient history treated in the manner he used would doubtless reveal the same inaccuracies. Coming down to the modern, Ferrero declared that the love of Cleopatra and Antony was one of the most forceful figures in the world. He said he looked upon Darwin's "Origin of Species" as the greatest achievement of human reason in the last century.
